The advantages of ISIS document
The advantages with Brother are

Specially developed for storing hardcopy documents to electronic archives, ISIS - (Image and Scanner Interface Specification) gives clear, accurate and secure results, allowing scanners to run at their rated speeds or higher.

It offers maximum compatibility not only with leading document management software such as Documentum, eCopy and Kofax, there are also hundreds of additional commercial applications being used by more than 10 million end users globally. It also offers compatibility with sophisticated IT systems using CITRIX and Terminal Services environments.

By introducing a consistent interface across different platforms, ISIS reduces the costs of implementation, training and maintenance, too.

Naturally, it's become the industry standard method of digitising documents, although so far it's only been available on dedicated scanners. But now, Brother is the first manufacturer to offer ISIS support on an all-in-one machine that also prints, copies and faxes; plus it can be added to an existing ISIS environment without the need for a system overhaul.

The table below illustrates the range of cost

Introducing the first all-in-one printers featuring ISIS support

These are the first high performance mono laser all-in-one printers to have ISIS technology as standard. They'll enable you to save money and increase efficiency as well as saving space, with one machine able to do high quality scanning, printing, copying and faxing.

You'll find they improve efficiency in other ways too, with a 50 sheet Automatic Document Feeder, fast print speeds, wired and wireless networking, automatic double-sided printing and optional high yield toner. Plus, to help control costs, some functions can be restricted to certain users.
